As we celebrate 40 years of service to children, birth parents, and adoptive families, National Council For Adoption remains the premier adoption advocacy nonprofit in the United States, promoting a culture of adoption through education, research, legislative action, and collaboration. Because of NCFA, more children are adopted out of foster care, women facing unintended pregnancy receive comprehensive information on the positive option of adoption, and intercountry adoption remains a viable, ethical option for building families.

Our vision is a loving, permanent family for all children everywhere. We recognize adoption as very often the only way children can have the unique love and security of a family, when their biological parents cannot parent them in a caring and stable home.

The thoughts of what my life would have been like if I wasn’t adopted have gone through my head frequently, and there are so many things I don’t know.

I don’t know what my parents look like.
I don’t know how old they are.
I don’t know if I had brothers and sisters.
I don’t know where I would have lived.
I don’t know if I would have been alive.

But, there are a couple of things I do know.
My name is Pia.
I’m 19 years old.
I’m currently studying for my bachelor’s degree in Mathematics and pursuing my dream to get into medical school after college.

My mom’s name is Josefina, my dad’s name is George, and they are the true definition of my “happily ever after.”

— Pia R.
